I'm designing a test to do some assertions on some data and I wanted to control the sample rate from user to user by sending a command to the client when a specific value is reached. How could I programatically force Jmeter to stop when a command is called? A: Assuming it is your JMeter test plan: Add listener in Thread Group. If it is not already defined - define it (Enter Listeners tab and add Listener to checkbox). Add `__FileToString()` function to the listener just after your command Add JSR223 PreProcessor in the same Thread Group and put the following code into its script: `import org.apache.jmeter.util.JMeterUtils; def fileToString = __FileToString() if (fileToString == null) { throw new RuntimeException("FileToString doesn't exist in thread group"); } JMeterUtils.setProperty("jmeter.threads.timeout", "2500"); Find "JSR223 PreProcessor" (Select Controller) in the list Scroll down to "Arbitrary JSR223 PostProcessor" and place your command into PostProcessor code Add assertions to your test plan as described in JMeter Plugins: Recording Assertions article. To make sure assertions are recorded, add the following line to top of your script ${__setProperty(thread_count)}=${__threadCount()} Add Stop 1cdb36666d`

When a computer begins to operate, it draws a constant supply of electricity to keep it powered and operational. A computer contains only a finite amount of memory. Therefore, when the computer encounters a memory error, the computer begins to write zeros to the portion of memory that is associated with the particular row in the memory. If the memory continues to be accessed and errors continue to be written to the memory, the amount of memory available for other use will decrease. The computer will often perform a system shutdown in order to release the memory for other use. However, in a storage area network (SAN), the other uses can be files or other storage devices. System shutdowns have a detrimental impact on the use of storage areas of the SAN.

Q: How can I use jQuery with a contentEditable DIV? I have a div with the contentEditable attribute in an asp.net form. How can I use jQuery to find the DIV and apply the the.val() of a text box to the form.

A: You just apply a div around your textbox, and make sure that your div has the contentEditable attribute set to true.

A: You can do this: `$('#div').bind('keydown', function (e) { e.stopPropagation(); var orig_value = $('#control').val(), modified_value = orig_value + $(this).val(); $('#control').val(modified_value); });`

For more on how to use the onkeyup, onkeydown, onmousedown, and onmousemove event handlers, see this article.

The HONDA IDAS H40 and H30 series were rated to incorporate the fuel conservation design improvements developed and tested on the T-HONDA HERO motorcycle during the TEN years of competition at the FIA World Endurance Championship and the IMSA SportsCar Championship. Based on all new technologies, including a lightweight, high-strength chassis, the first-ever engineering study of the powertrain for the most sustainable electric motor and batteries on a motorcycle, and a composite composite high-strength material developed at Honda R&D Americas, the IDAS H40 and H30 have the potential to preserve almost as much energy as they produce. Rated to incorporate the fuel conservation design improvements developed and tested on the T-HONDA HERO motorcycle during the TEN years of competition at the FIA World Endurance Championship and the IMSA SportsCar Championship, the IDAS H40 and H30 have the potential to conserve over 40 percent of the energy created by the powertrain. Both the revised IDAS H40 and H30 variants were manufactured by Honda's Environmental Research Center, and have been tested on track and in the real world. Both motorcycles incorporate the fuel conservation design improvements that have allowed the battery pack to be reduced in size by 42 percent, which has enabled the motorcycles to have a range of over 100 miles on a single charge. Both motorcycles also have
